There are some things that stick with you when you're a born-and-bred Chicagoan, and even with a thriving career in Hollywood, actor Sufe Bradshaw's Windy City charm is unmistakable—such as when she answers every question with “Thank you for asking.” That gracious personality has likely contributed to her success. Currently, Bradshaw stars in the popular HBO series Veep, which premieres its third season this spring amid considerable critical acclaim, including three Emmy Awards in 2013. We spoke with Bradshaw about her role as Sue Wilson, the executive assistant to Vice President Selena Meyer (played by Julia Louis-Dreyfus); a fascinating documentary film she's making; and what it was like growing up with eight siblings.
